Macklin, Saskatchewan

Seven Sons are Serving - and a Grandson

Father says: Buy Victory Bonds

A RECORD of service of which any family can be proud . . . and which makes a country proud to have them as citizens, is that of the Stang family of Macklin, Saskatchewan.

Mike Stang and his wife came to Canada from Russia, in 1908, settling on a farm south of Macklin. They are now residents of that town. There are eight sons in the family; seven of them are now in the armed forces: Pte. Leo J. Stang; A.C.I, Mike Stang; A.C.I, John L. Stang; Bdr. William A. Stang; Sgt. August J. Stang; Cpl. Paul A. Stang and A.C.I, Francis E. Stang. A grandson, L/Cpl. Edelbert Stang, a son of Pte. Leo Stang is also serving.

"Some of us can fight. Some can't. But all can do a share to help to win", says Mike Stang. "And every citizen of Canada should do a part."

"One thing that all can do is to buy Victory Bonds. There is a lot of fighting to do yet. Our soldiers can't stop until their job is finished. And we who are at home can't cut off their support. They need our help now just as much as they ever did — maybe more. We must keep on buying Victory Bonds."

"It's not much hardship to save money and that is all we do when we buy Victory Bonds. We save money — which we will have after the war — and the country pays us good interest on our bonds. Victory Bonds are the best things that Canadians can buy."
